

Exposing the Invisible

The digital age has profoundly transformed the way people find and share information. The traditional gatekeepers of secrecy – governments, corporations, criminals – now find themselves exposed in the public realm. Equipped with smartphones and social media, ordinary people are uncovering secrets and bringing the truth to light.

It's time to rethink the role of investigation in modern activism. With digital technology, anyone has the potential to be an agent of change. Information is our most effective weapon against corruption, oppression and injustice. Through a series of short films, Exposing the Invisible tells the stories of those working at the new frontiers of investigative reporting. We hope to inspire the next generation of activists, hackers, journalists – anyone committed to finding the truth and using it for social good.